Pottery Demonstration: African Coil Building

Juliet Bacchas demonstrates the African coiling technique with which she hand builds her vessels, and then the process of cutting through a vessel to create patterns. She was taught by Jamaican master potters at the Edna Manley College of Visual and Performing Arts. Bacchas became familiar the African Coiling Technique on one of her field studies to the pottery studio of one of Jamaica's traditional potters (Munchie). Bacchas is immensely grateful and proud to carry on their tradition of excellence. Come to Salmon Falls Gallery to learn something new for your own clay work or to simply enjoy seeing the process of handbuilding in clay.
